HONGKONG, THURSDAY, FEB. 6, 1868

THE PRAYA QUESTION. 'COVENANT" is from a Hebrew word meaning a dissection or cutting up, because victims were anciently sacrificed when a covenant was entered into. The Hongkong Government are wishful improve on this practice, and to make sacrifice accompany their interpretation a covenant; the "victim calf" being the Praya-lot holders, and the sacrificia priests being the jury who will sit tomorrow. Whether they will fulfil the expectations entertained by His Excellenoy and " out up " the proposed victim, is a question, the decision of which we shall not venture to anticipate. The matter at issue is a very important one to the whole of this community, for it is meant to define whether a certain heavy responsibility is particular or generalconfined to comparatively few persons or attaching to all of us, not only for the present but also for future time. And the jury will be the real interpreters the law and the covenant. There w be no facts in dispute before them. that they will have to do is to draw their own conclusions as to the legal intent of documents in which the contract between the Government and the Praya-lot holders is expressed. And it is right that a question of this nature should be argued in public. His Excellency, we understand, desired that it might be heard chambers, but the defendants judiciously claimed a common law right, and the public will therefore have an opportunity of hearing the arguments by which the Government maintain their allegation that the responsibility of repairing the Praya Wall, and of maintaining it and the Praya itself, rests solely on the Praya

There are, it is said, no less than five several and different forms of contract under which the Praya lots are held, and from the covenants therein the jury are asked—they may not perhaps be directed -to draw an inference or deduction favorable to the plaintiff, and find in them an implied covenant to do what plaintiff insists on. Now an "implied" covenant or one in law, is that which the law implies though it is not expressed in words An "express" covenant, which is one fact, is evidenced by deed. It is certain that in many cases there is no "express covenant in the Praya-lot deeds for the maintenance of the Praya by the occu-

lot holders, and ought not to be provided for out of the general revenue.

pier. If there is one "implied," the jury will no doubt discover it. One lease now before us, dated April 1859, contains the following clause:-

"And also that the said A.B., his exeoutors, administrators and assigns, shall at his or their own proper costs and charge construct on the north boundary of premises hereby demised, a public road way or praya, 50 feet wide, and on the completion of which to the satisfaction of Surveyor of Her said Majesty the rent now naid shall be reduced to --- per annum; an also that the said A.B., his executors, ad ministrators and assigns shall and during the term hereby granted, as often as need shall require, bear, pay and allow a reasonable share and proportion for and towards the costs and charges of making, building, repairing and amending all or any, roads, pavements, channels, fences and party walls, draughts, private or publi sewers and drains, requisite for, or in or belonging to the said demised premises, or | named a course de Chars a boufs. Alany part thereof, in common with other together there seems to be a very amuspremises near or adjoining thereto and that ing programme provided, and we congressuch proportions shall be fixed and ascertulate our Saigon friends upon their tained by the Surveyor of Her said Majesty, and shall be recoverable in the nature

Now what is the most probable implication here! We see an "express" covenant to make a portion of a road for 'publio" uses. The contract when made was what is known in law as executory, detract from the anusement of the day, that is, it provided that certain work although unusual to English ears. should be done during a period named. That work being done the contract bedomes so far executed, and in the instance above quoted the "express" covenant Myburgh, Esq., late H.B.M.'s Consul at Myburgh, Esq., late H.B.M.'s Consul at Ranagawa. He died at Osaka, but we have read was made and surrendered for not yet learned the particulars, to the amount specified. This seems to militate against the government theory of continued responsibility for the maintenance of the praya by the tenant. In the first place, the express terms of the covenant are that he shall "make," but it does not say he shall " maintain;" and we should be inclined to doubt the sanity of any man who signed a contract which fastened such a responsibility perpetual ly upon himself, his heirs, or his assigns It would be in effect undertaking to make a road, and then throw it open to public use; and if the sea destroyed a portion of it, or public traffic injured it. he would, notwithstanding that he had surrendered all private right to it, defray the cost of repairs from his own pocket If such contract as this can be "implied" from the various forms of deed, under which the lots are held, the learned Attorney General will of course make the inference clear; but where it is to come from is at present uncertain. It cannot be derived from the words in the latter part of the clause relating to "all or any roads," etc., for that covenant is contained in the inland lot deeds. It is not asserted that inland lot holders are liable for the repairs of their streets, except generally as rate-payers; if the jury believe, however, that the words of the covenant have a special significance in the marine lot deed, and that it was bona fide the intent of the parties at the time the contract was made that the tenant should be perpetually bound to do what the Government now ask of him, they may find a verdict for plaintiff. They will doubtless be charged, however, that express covenants are taken more strictly than implied covenants; and that an express covenant being part of a deed is subject earlier; for this dispute is one which in the interests of the public generally should be settled quickly. The prays is rapidly decaying, and the expense of its future repair is proportionately increasing. . A moderate gale might add another $20,000 to the already heavy bill. As we have said, we shall not anticipate the verdict. The jury is composed of gentlemen especially selected with reference to the ialifications that are most desirable in rymen. If they find for the plaintiff, the marine lot holders are apparently under an obligation which should be borne by the whole colony; if the defendants successfully establish their plea of not indebted, we trust His Excellency will at once set about raising the means for repairing the Praya. Our own opinion is that the best and fairest method is by special rate on the basis of the existing assessment. In this way every one would contribute to the restoration of a public work, in the care and maintenance of which all are interested. The largest amount of such a rate would of course come from the properties on the Praya, and we really believe that we express the feeling of the community in saying that the marine lot holders ought not to be subjected exclusively to the charge sought to be fixed on them, but that the cost should be defrayed by the public at large. The knowledge of this fact will not of course operate with the jury, if the legal liability of the marine lot holders is made out; and whether that can be done or not we shall be able to say perhaps by this time to-morrow. At least, we hope so, and most people here will be glad if the jury find themselves in a position conscientiously to declare that the marine lot leases are not binding to the extent asserted by Government, and that therefore the marine lot holders are not solely esponsible for the reintegration of the Praya and its wall. There must be a sacrifice, no doubt, but it is one in which we should all share.

Salgon is making a great stride in what Englishmen consider civilization, or at least the exhibition of civilized proclivities, inasmuch as annual races have become an established fact. A programme with which we have been favored, and which, by the way, is an astonishing specimen of Saigon typography as to size, gives the list of races, prizes, and conditions of the races, the largest amount figuring as 3,000 francs for European horses and mares ridden by Europeans "en tenue de course." The general list is as follows:—1, Prix d'Annam, prizes of 250, 100, and 75 francs, scrutch weight for Annamife horses, riders in Annamite costume, 1,200 motres. 2, Priv de Cholen, for Asiatic horses and riders, costume at discretion, prizes 350, 150, and 75 france The three following races are for 500, 400, and 600 francs, two of them being rotting races. Then comes the "Derby for 3,000 francs above alluded to, followed by four others for 1.000, 600, 1.000and 150 francs. The 600 francs race is for Asiatic trotters, the next for a trotting race in four wheelers, and the last prospects of an agreeable meeting. The programme is "approved" by Admiral de la Grandiere, as Vice Admiral Gover nor and Commander in chief, so it would seem to be got up under official adspices -a somewhat novel way of starting races. But we presume this will not
